

Skills and interests (public health academic)

This page offers you a brief description of some of the main skill and qualities needed by public health academics.

Some of the skills you'll need as a public health academic include:

- being able to communicate well, both verbally and in writing
- being able to convey ideas and concepts clearly and effectively to a wide range of audiences
- excellent research skills
- well-developed organisational skills
- coping with changing demands
- negotiation skills
- understanding and appreciating other organisational cultures
- managing budgets

- acting as a positive role model
- managing and motivating colleagues

You may find it helpful to take a look at our career planning ^[1] section to think more about the skills and qualities you have to offer.

Source URL: <https://www.healthcareers.nhs.uk/explore-roles/public-health/roles-public-health/public-health-academic/skills-and-interests-public-health-academic>

Links

[1] <https://www.healthcareers.nhs.uk/career-planning>