

Skills and interests (public health practitioner)

This page offers you a brief summary of some the skills needed by public health practitioners.

Some of the skills and qualities you'll need as a public health practitioner include:

- well developed people skills
- an ability to value difference and diversity
- creativity and adaptability
- analysing and interpreting information
- an ability to create marketing materials, publications and reports
- making recommendations about how services could be delivered

More detailed information about necessary skills can be found on the example roles we have listed on our public health practitioner ^[1] role page.

Public health practitioners have skills and knowledge primarily at levels 5-7 of the Skills for Health Career Framework ^[2].

You might also find it helpful to take a look at our career planning section ^[3] to think more about the skills and qualities you have to offer.
