Accelerated programmes

Accelerated or shortened pre-registration courses are available in certain clinical professions.

Typically, these courses allow graduates of other subject disciplines to undertake approved pre-registration training in two years instead of three or four. This is because accreditation for prior experiential learning (APEL) can be given by the university. Such courses are available in:

- nursing – adult, children’s, learning disabilities, and mental health fields
- diagnostic and therapeutic radiography
- dietetics
- occupational therapy
- physiotherapy
- speech and language therapy

Graduates of other disciplines can undertake approved pre-registration training in two years instead of three or four

There are also accelerated courses in medicine and dentistry. These generally take four years instead of the standard five.

You can search for approved accelerated courses using our course finder. Alternatively, approved courses, including accelerated programmes, are listed on the websites of the relevant professional body:

- Health and Care Professions Council
- Nursing and Midwifery Council
- General Medical Council
- General Dental Council

Entry requirements
Universities set their own entry requirements for accelerated programmes. You may need a relevant degree, for example in a science or social science subject. If you have a degree-equivalent qualification such as a professional award, this may be acceptable for entry to an accelerated programme.

The UCAS website allows you to search for full-time courses and view entry requirements. More detailed information about specific courses can be found in university prospectuses and on their websites.

You apply for accelerated programmes either through UCAS or directly to the university where you want to study.

Recruiting for values
If you’re applying for a university programme leading to a role providing NHS healthcare, you’ll be asked to show how you think the NHS values would apply in your everyday work.

Financial support
Traditionally, financial support from the NHS has been available for students on accelerated pre-registration programmes. However, this is changing. Please visit our financial support page for the latest information.
